CLASS HISTORY

In the lifetime of every boy or girl there is a time of transition when he carefully tucks away his ego with his eighth grade diploma in order to don the inconspicuous role of a freshman.

Thus, the Class of '59, haltingly found way into Sister M. Kevina's domain, where a good high school education and a refinement of mind and manner were made the cornerstone of our four years study.

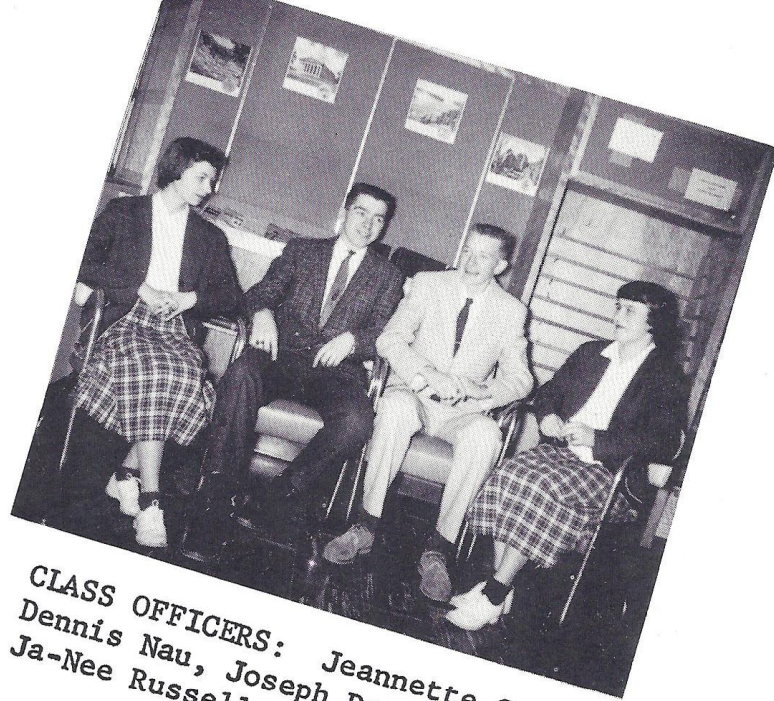

Like all poor Freshman we struggled with the usual subjects including the formidable Latin. But if the subject matter was the same old tried and true, at least in Art class we had an outlet for creativeness. Here were produced with no little pain and patience, figurines, copper work, and charcoal drawings. To assure the eighth grade that high school was fun too, we invited them to dance with us in the old Opera House gym to the strains of "Lisbon Antiqua".

Another September and into the Sophomore room we came and to Sister M. Spiritus, who was growing wiser in the ways of sophomores. With "operations" in the biology lab every week, life was anything but dull. Our interest in the fine arts was further developed when our budding actors staged the premiere of the Academy hit "The Persecuted Maiden". As spring approached, many noon hours were whiled away noting the mammoth proportions of the new Academy.

As Juniors we surveyed a strange and beautiful edifice, the completed high school. Upon that entrance, we were considerably bolder and Sister M. Teresine, new at the Academy, spent much time putting a little timidity back into us. Early in the year we joined forces to produce a successful Autumn Festival assisting in the delicatessan department. For once we had seen enough spaghetti. Winter was highlighted by two important events -- the arrival of class rings and the Junior Prom. Our favorite colors, red and white, blended in a Valentine theme which was mysteriously named "Magic Moments". Signs of our proficiency in the use of the written word were evidenced as class members won prize after prize in the essay and poetry contests, in addition to publishing a monthly edition of "The Laurel". Our class produced three nuns this year--at least long enough to play the role in "Murder Takes the Veil".

As Seniors we easily stepped into the role of lords and masters and were quick to put the freshmen in their place by means of the traditional initiation. Sister M. Barbara assumed charge of us, sparking our nobler ideas, curbing the lesser ones. Many hours of practice produced a team of Panthers whose winning games and fine spirit made us proud of them. In November we set before the admiring eyes of the student body our galleon "S. S. Academy" at the Senior Ball which was centered around the theme "Red Sails in the Sunset". As the year advanced, Mother M. Rebecca took orders for graduation invitations -- sad reminder that Maytime would bring to an end our days at I. H. M. In accordance with Bishop Byrne's proclamation making 1959 Diocesan Eucharistic Year, we chose "Unity through the Eucharist" as our Class Motto with the corresponding colors, scarlet and white.

Four years and many trials and triumphs later, twenty-five seniors extend hands to accept a second diploma, enduring symbol of Christian education and the best years of our lives.
